Downtown's iconic venues

It's been decades since the old train station served as a focal point for daily life in Salmon Arm. Iconic events there included a visit by Princess Elizabeth in 1951, and the infamous Trudeau salute 41 years ago.

Justin Trudeau sat next to his dad as a ten-year-old lad on Aug. 8, 1982, and Conservative MP Mel Arnold marked this anniversary by posting a video at the spot to score a couple political points.

Now there's a new place downtown for iconic events. Our giant treble clef offers a most special backdrop for a stage before an audience pouring down Alexander.

Roots & Blues hosted a kickoff concert there last year, and is doing it again next Thursday at 6 pm. See you next week at the Treble Clef. ■

> Cricket returned to Salmon Arm like a phoenix from the ashes on a smokey inaugural game day. The new club hosted Revelstoke last Sunday. Previously, a club operated from 1911 to 1939, interrupted by the two Great Wars.

There's something about the northwest corner of 30th St. and Trans Canada NE. This accident was the third one at this spot in one month.

Fire continues

The Lower East Adams Lake Wildfire is moving slowly down the east side with growth heading into steep terrain.

BC Wildfire Service updated its size to 6,505 hectares, and despite rain activity, the fire remain listed Out of Control.

BC Hydro restored power to the Evacuation Order area at approximately 4 pm Wednesday. The current Evacuation Orders and Alerts remain in place. ■

Expanded beach & rooftop camping

> You can not see the distant mountains when this photo was shot by the City of Salmon Arm but you see the expanse of extended sandy beach now west of the Canoe Beach boat launch. This part of the shore was formerly occupied by leased cabins.

> The roof of the Ross Street stage was turned into a temporary camping spot until police and a city crew intervened. It was not clear how such a location could provide shelter from sun, smoke, rain and attention.

What is needed for healthy fodder

By NICK PARSONS

Due to the past several seasons of dry weather, grass pastures haven't been able to produce well for grazing or hay this summer.

The fertilizing with phosphate and potash I did last Fall, followed by nitrogen this Spring, only produced 40 per cent of normal hay production of recent years.

Second cuts are non-existent without irrigation that only the larger commercial producers have access to.

Hay is already coming into the Southern Okanagan from the US. I have seen very green good alfalfa hay on large semi-trucks in Salmon Arm heading north and west. This is a sure sign of fodder shortage in the dairy and beef industries.

I will not have hay to market this year as in the past. There are other small producers in the same boat.

Fodder availability greatly depends on the number of grass cuts that the big hay and silage producers - selling on the open market - can squeeze out of their irrigated land before the eventual Fall weather arrives in October. Round Bale silage that is often more nutritious than hay will be in high demand.

Availability and demand are essential for the dairy and beef industries, not forgetting horses and for all farm livestock.

Shortages can create firmer prices, but farming, unlike most other industries, is often slow to take advantage of raising prices. It is the nature of long term rural life and well being, past hardships and a sound future with consistent markets. Plenty of snow and a wet Spring are high on the bucket list for 2024. Warm sunshine, rainwater and good soil are the elements for fodder production. If just one of these is eliminated, there will be little. ■ □ Nick Parsons farmed many years in the UK and Peace Country and now grows hay and vegetables on his Gleneden area farm. He is also Friday AM's weatherman and regular contributor to Second Harvest.

Shuswap String Orchestra Society

We need a conductor/director to lead us

Our Society is an amateur group of about 20 string players of all ages who rehearse once each week (on Wednesdays at 4:30-6:00pm in Salmon Arm during schooldays) and perform occasional concerts. The music is as wide a range of styles as you can imagine and playable by anyone who has studied their instrument for a few years. Our players are enthusiastic about their music and eager to try new musical experiences.

If you are interested in this challenging position, please contact me for more detailed information and discussion,

Ear to the GROUND

Easy money?

Often you just have to shake your heads on how out of touch wonks who put out public relation releases can be. Consider this post from a source called Moving2Canada. It reads: "It's no secret that life in British Columbia can get expensive. If you live in BC and are looking to make some extra cash to keep up with the cost of living, it may be easier than you think! Return-it, BC's program for beverage container recycling, makes it easy to earn extra cash just by bringing empty beverage containers to a Return-it location near you. You even get paid the same day!"

Wow, and you even get paid the same day! Anyway, my last trip to Bill's Bottle depot earned me enough cash to buy a coffee at Tim's, not including gas. It most definitely did not help finance the BC dream. ■

Stolen Ebike

> Emily Dechant is shown at a happier time, prior to her beloved Ebike getting stolen from the backyard of her apartment near the City Hall on July 30. The easily identifiable bike has easily identifiable features as shown in photo. Call the RCMP or Emily at 236-838-1810 if you have information. A reward is offered. Let's get her bike back. Battery was not attached at the time of theft.

How does the fountain at Shuswap National Golf make its water bursts come out aqua blue?

MOLEHI

Lorne Reimer

Busy highways

I thoroughly enjoy my monthly drives around the Shuswap, delivering the All Month issues, and usually have just enough energy left to throw together a little report.

I noted three observations:

1. Traffic was unbelievably heavy, especially through Enderby and Sicamous.
2. The air was smoky all day, and actual ash was falling. It got worse on the final leg to Scotch Creek, naturally as it got close to Adams Lake.
3. I made an unscientific observation about headlights: 90 per cent of vehicles have lights on during the day 70 per cent display the new variety of LED lights - many with a purple hue, and fancy lines.

As with every edition, there's my "Oh no!" moment when I discover an error or omission, often the worst possible. This week I forgot to put in an "In memory" notice for Audrey Szafranski who died a year ago August. 5. I will make up for it next week. Sorry!

> I began this week discovering the Cardiff Miller Art Warehouse in Enderby and ended the week today delighted by the new murals on Cliff Avenue The turtle is awesome. Who's the artist?

> If you haven't seen inside the Notch Hill Express Railway car it is parked long term by Sorrento Inn.

Cricket is back!

> The phoenix of a nearly forgotten historic sport in Salmon Arm has gloriously risen from the smokey air and fallen ashes today. Cricket was a big thing from 1911 to 1939 but so rudely interrupted by two Great Wars. On this day, Salmon Arm's new cricket club hosted Revelstoke for an inaugural game on the field next to the Downtown Activity Centre.

History of Cricket in Salmon Arm

From MemoryBC.com

Salmon Arm Cricket Club was organized in 1911 with members that included R.H. Fortune, John Harragin, George Holmes, H. Verity, Eric Bivar, A.D. Meek, W. Meek, Hugh and Norman Bowden, a bank clerk, Ashton and Claude Barlow. Team members played at the Fall Fair in Armstrong, travelling by democrat buggies, switching horses in Enderby.

Agnes McGuire donated four acres to the west of the wharf for a playing field. The club members cleared and levelled the grounds. The north end was developed into tennis courts. A pavilion was made out of a shed donated by Mrs. McGuire.

In 1914 the club was disbanded with news of the Great War. It reconvened in the 1920s with the help of the Doe family.

The 1936 members consisted of Guy Elphinston, Art Smith, Don Campbell, Vic Nancollas, J. Nancollas, R. Harvey, Alex Cragg, Constable Hodgkin, Max Ladner, N.H. Bowden, M. Pottie, T. Prescott, Jack Milling, Major F. Bivar, N.C. Dawson. ■

> Two of the things I miss from the 70s now that I hit my 70s: Grandma and her home cooking and baking, except her Maxwell house instant coffee, and the energy to embrace 10-day canoe tripping. How is it that today's grandmas look so young? I actually know one grandma who just hiked the Coquitam Crunch Good to youtube and search "I'm going back by The Douglas Brothers for a song about picking raspberries with our Grandma, written and sung by my cousin Mark.

Some of the comments that followed this post:

> "It makes me chuckle when I read about women younger than me described (mostly in books) as grey and grandmotherly and other old adjectives. Look around you!" ~ Linzy

> "My grandmother looked much the way yours did for all the time I knew her - from when she was 65 till she was 95! Her hair might have grown a little whiter but it was hard to tell with that pulled-back bun. She also did much the same things over that time, which included climbing a ladder to access the niche above the cellar steps where she stored the mason jars full of her home canning. But hike the Coquitlam Crunch? Nope. She wouldn't have even considered it...also she wouldn't have had time." ~ Leslie

> So true! One night I stayed over and she combed out her hair and was I stunned how it flowed down to her lower back... It was forever in a tight bun. Another of my memories was us kids in our grandparents farmhouse upstairs looking through a grate into the kitchen below listening to our mom chatting with her parents in German. Every once in a while we'd hear our individual names mentioned and wonder what the heck they were saying about us." ~ Lorne

> "Grammas are so different today. The key is staying active. As a great grandmother I'm trying to stay active (mind and body) although this smoke is making my daily walk difficult. ~ Kay

> "I'm going to have to steal that picture of you and grandma. We don't have many pics of her. I sure remember that mint green wall and table cloth. Oh and those gold colored tea cups!" ~ Marcia

> "Just photoshop your head in there! lol. Memories, eh!" ~ Lorne

> "All my grandparents had died by the time I was ten. My paternal grandma died when my father was in India in 1944. My faint memories of my remaining grandparents are that they seemed very old, although they were probably only in their 70s." ~ Joan

Blood loving aliens among us

The aliens are among us. They're just really really tiny. This is a mosquito under an electron microscope. It has exactly 100 eyes, 48 teeth, 3 hearts, a heat receptor that is one thousandth of a degree Celsius, a very advanced blood analyzer, and anesthetic and anticoagulant devices to absorb the blood. There are six tiny blades on its suction pipe; with four of them that make a square incision and the other two forms a tube to absorb the blood. They also have claws and hooks on their feet to hold on to their food source. What an amazing world around us!
